

“Amazing Grace” movie delivers an amazing story!

By Woodrow Wilcox

I attended the National Religious Broadcasters convention in Orlando, Florida.

On one evening of the five day event, the new motion picture “Amazing Grace” was shown.

“Amazing Grace” is the story of William Wilburforce. He hated the slave trade in the British Empire. He decided to fight it. He spent 47 years of his life to end slavery in the British Empire.

When he started, people told him that it could not be done. But, he persisted. William Wilburforce was a Christian who believed that God had ordained him to fight to end slavery in the British Empire. So, he acted on that faith.

According to one of my friends, William Wilburforce and his allies developed political opinion influencing campaign strategies that are still used today. The slavery abolitionists of Britain led by William Wilburforce were very creative and intelligent in their campaign development. It was as though they had help from a super intelligent political genius.

The dedication and sincere beliefs of this Christian can be an inspiration to many people. I recommend that you see the film “Amazing Grace”.

Written and syndicated on February 27, 2007 by Woodrow Wilcox
Griffith, IN